REFLECTIONS ON THE EUCHARIST

Over the next four weeks, we will be hearing on Sunday from the sixth chapter of The Gospel of St. John which contains John's version of Jesus feeding the 5,000 and his very powerful "Bread of Life" discourse. As more and more of you are returning to celebrating the Eucharist in person and we have just witnessed a great deal of division among the bishops in our country regarding the worthy reception of the Eucharist, I would like to offer some important quotations from a statement that the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops (USCCB) published in 2006 in this regard; it is entitled "Happy Are Those Who Are Called to His Supper." I re-read it recently and found it to be very enlightening. The document begins with a powerful summary statement:

The celebration of the Mass is the center of the life of the Church. The heart of the Mass is the Eucharistic Prayer, for through this prayer Christ's sacrifice is both recalled and made present and we give our thanks and praise to God. The consummation of the Mass, however, occurs in Holy Communion, where we eat and drink the Body and Blood of Christ. At each Eucharistic liturgy, Jesus speaks his healing word to us and gives to us his life-giving Body and Blood - his very self. In so doing, Christ continually nourishes and forms his pilgrim Church as she journeys towards the Kingdom. In the Roman rite, immediately prior to receiving Holy Communion, the priest calls us to the joy of receiving the Lord, saying, "This is the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world. Happy are those who are called to his supper." In the presence of such a great gift, we humbly respond echoing the words of the Roman centurion: "Lord, I am not worthy to have you enter under my roof; only say the word and my servant will be healed" (Mt 8:8). Because of our own human sinfulness none of us is worthy of so great a gift. Yet, Jesus comes to us in the Eucharist to give us a share in his divine life.

In these first sentences of this document, we are reminded about the centrality of the Eucharistic celebration, our unworthiness to receive our Lord and Jesus' eagerness to come to us to give us a share in his divine life to nourish us and form us as we journey toward God's Kingdom. With this powerful introduction, the bishops recognize their "responsibility to nurture the faith of our Catholic brothers and sisters in this most wondrous mystery - Jesus' Real Presence in Holy Communion." Then, they lay out the purpose of their document:

- to affirm clearly what the Church believes and teaches concerning the Eucharist and the reception of Holy Communion;
- to provide a clear affirmation as to who may receive Holy Communion within a Catholic Eucharistic celebration; and
- to recommend some practices that every Catholic can use for preparing to receive Holy Communion in a more worthy fashion.

The first purpose of this document is accomplished in a very straightforward manner with the following declaration:

Holy Communion is a sharing in the Eucharist in which Christ is truly present. The priest, recalling the words and actions of Jesus at the Last Supper, consecrates the bread and wine, which are changed, by the power of the Holy Spirit, into the Body and Blood of Christ. ...While the appearances of bread and wine remain, the Risen Lord Jesus is actually present, and so it is he who is actually received in Holy Communion - Body and Blood, soul and divinity.

We believe that Jesus gave his disciples his own sacred Body and Blood as the sign of the "new and everlasting covenant" at the Last Supper. And then, he instructed them to "do this in memory of me." Whenever we participate in a Eucharistic celebration, we are entering that timeless event and receiving this precious gift of God himself. That is why the bishops quote the Catechism of the Catholic Church which teaches that "the principal fruit of receiving the Eucharist in Holy Communion is an intimate union with Christ Jesus." So, the document goes on:

The reception of Holy Communion is an act of the Church as the Body of Christ. While we each personally receive Holy Communion, it is not a private devotion. Rather, the reception of Holy Communion is an integral part of our worship as a community of faith. Likewise, the term "communion" accentuates the fact that, in receiving Holy Communion, we are united to Jesus and thus to one another. As we become one body with Christ in receiving Holy Communion, so we are also united with one another.

The Eucharist is, indeed, a precious gift and one that we all want to receive worthily because it is God himself that we are receiving and it draws us together as the Body of Christ.

This leads us to the next purpose of the document: to provide a clear affirmation as to who may receive Holy Communion within a Catholic Eucharistic celebration. The first requirement is easy to understand: “only those who are members of the Catholic Church may receive Holy Communion at a Catholic Eucharistic liturgy.” “By its very nature,” this statement continues, “the Eucharist is the fulfillment to which our shared life in union with Christ tends – it fortifies our common faith, nurtures the communal bond of love, and increases our holiness within the one body of Christ. As the Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches: ‘The Eucharist is the source and summit of the Christian life.’”

The bishops go on to explain that there are times when we should refrain from receiving Holy Communion. Their statement begins this section, however, with this important disclaimer:

In virtue of our membership in the Catholic Church we are ordinarily free to receive Holy Communion. In fact, it is most desirable that we receive the Lord’s Body and Blood, so that Holy Communion stands out clearly as a participation in the sacrifice actually being celebrated. Indeed, we should all cherish the grace given to us in the Eucharist. We should strive to receive Holy Communion regularly, gratefully, and worthily. We may find ourselves in situations, however, where an examination of our conscience before God reveals to us that we should refrain from partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ. Moreover, we should be cautious when making judgments about whether or not someone else should receive Holy Communion.

It is in the examination of our conscience that each of us comes to understand that we should not receive Holy Communion and we should be cautious in making judgments about others’ worthiness to receive Holy Communion.

Finally, the bishops recommend “some practices that every Catholic can use for preparing to receive Holy Communion in a more worthy fashion.” Pointing out that the “Mass is not simply a private encounter between an individual and Jesus Christ,” the bishops “point out various ways in which each individual can better prepare himself or herself for Mass and can enter more deeply into the Eucharistic celebration, in order to receive the Body and Blood of Christ more worthily.” Their statement goes on to explain:

There are two interrelated ways in which we foster the worthy reception of Holy Communion. One is through “remote preparation,” and the other is through “proximate preparation.” The first has to do with how we live our Christian lives every day. The second has to do with how we come to and participate in the Eucharistic liturgy itself.

The document goes on to give examples of both ways to better prepare to receive Holy Communion worthily. Remote preparation includes:

- regular prayer and Scripture reading;
- faithful and loving fulfillment of the duties and responsibilities of our state in life; and
- daily repentance of sin and regular participation in the Sacrament of Penance.

Proximate preparation for the reception of Holy Communion includes:

- prayerful recollection prior to coming to Mass;
- the Eucharistic fast;
- appropriate attire; and
- active participation in the Eucharistic celebration.

In this way, we will be able “to approach the altar for Holy Communion with reverence, love and awe.” This is very good advice for all of us. As we prepare to hear passages from the Gospel of John’s “Bread of Life” discourse, I encourage you to take this advice to heart. Thus, as the bishops offer at the conclusion of their statement on the Eucharist, we will be able to follow the exhortation from St. John Paul II with which they conclude their statement:

Pope John Paul II exhorted all Catholics to contemplate the Eucharistic face of Christ. Every time we receive Holy Communion, we have the opportunity to do this. In the Eucharist, Jesus brings to us his divine life, and we bring to him our lives of joy and suffering. In this communion with Christ we grow in faith, that our salvation is indeed near at hand; we grow in hope, that our heavenly risen life is already our possession; we grow in love, that in the love of the Spirit we are here and now bound to our loving Father and to our brothers and sisters in Christ.

I hope you find this summary helpful and encourage you to read the entire statement. You will find it easily on the internet; simply type in the title. The Eucharist should be the source of unity in the Church and this 2006 USCCB statement helps us to realize it more and more fully in our lives.
